Iberia Parishwide School District, LA Series 2026 GO School Building Bonds Rated 'AA-'; Outlook Stable

August 20, 2026

Overview

- S&P Global Ratings assigned its 'AA-' long-term rating to Iberia Parishwide School District, Louisiana's proposed $25 million series 2026 general obligation (GO) school building bonds.
- At the same time, S&P Global Ratings affirmed its 'AA-' rating on the district's existing GO debt.
- The outlook is stable.

Rationale

Security

An unlimited ad valorem tax applied to all eligible property within the district secures the bonds.

The district will use the proceeds for various capital improvement projects throughout the district, according to the voter-approved bond proposition from 2023.

Credit highlights

The rating reflects the district's strong financial performance and robust general fund reserves, which offset a weak economic profile characterized by lower wealth, income, and gross county product relative to peers. Rating stability depends on the district maintaining its strong reserve.

Conservative budgeting and proactive financial management have supported three consecutive general fund surpluses despite declining enrollment. While fiscal 2026 (June 30 fiscal year-end) results are preliminary estimates, results appear approximately balanced, with officials anticipating only a negligible deficit in a worst-case scenario.

For fiscal 2027, the budget includes a small enrollment decline and approximately $3 million in new expenditures due to a mandated teacher stipend, which may lead to an operational deficit. However, given the district's history of outperforming budget projections, officials expect year-end results will likely be closer to balanced. We believe the district will continue to make necessary adjustments to maintain balance without significant fund balance draws; however, sustained deficit operations and a trend of reserve declines could introduce rating pressure.

The rating reflects our view of the district's:

- Location in south central Louisiana with an economy focused on agriculture and oil-field services. Officials noted numerous industrial developments throughout the district, which are bringing in significant numbers of new jobs to the area. There is also commercial and residential development, with multiple subdivisions in stages of development slated to bring in hundreds of single-family homes. The district's population has been consistently declining, though officials believe these economic developments may lead to moderation in the rate of decline. Management also believes residential development could contribute to stabilization in enrollment trends.
- Robust reserves that support credit quality. While the district is exposed to elevated physical risks due to its location near the Gulf Coast, we believe the maintenance of strong reserves will allow it to respond to any immediate needs resulting from hurricane or flooding damage. The district maintains emergency preparedness policies and procedures to limit operational disruptions and to support its response after a natural disaster.
- Conservative budgeting practices that have supported balance despite enrollment declines. Management monitors the budget with monthly reporting to the board, and amends the budget as needed. There is no formal long-term financial forecasting or frequently updated capital plan. The district provides quarterly investment reports to the board and maintains a formal fund balance policy to maintain above 15% of expenditures in unrestricted general fund balance. The district's cybersecurity mitigation practices are in line with our view of credit quality.
- Debt is manageable, with pension liabilities that are elevated compared with many national peers' and elevated pension costs. The district will likely approach voters in the next few years to authorize additional debt that would be issued to continue working on its long-term capital improvement plan. The district does not have a set timing or amount for this authorization, but believes it would be similar in amount to the $62.5 million authorization from 2023.

Outlook

The stable outlook reflects our view that local economic conditions will remain stable, supporting the district's finances and allowing the district to maintain its strong fund balance.

Downside scenario

We could consider a negative rating action if the district's operations become imbalanced or if capital needs lead to material draws on reserves without a plan to restore. We could also lower the rating if debt increases materially to levels that worsen debt metrics to levels no longer comparable with peers.

Upside scenario

While we do not view this as likely within our outlook horizon, we could take positive rating action if the local economy expands and diversifies, bringing economic metrics to levels comparable with higher-rated peers while the district develops a more comprehensive approach to long-term planning, improving our view of its financial management practices.

The ratings appearing below the new issues represent an aggregation of debt issues (ASID) associated with related maturities. The maturities similarly reflect our opinion about the creditworthiness of the U.S. Public Finance obligor's legal pledge for payment of the financial obligation. Nevertheless, these maturities may have different credit ratings than the rating presented next to the ASID depending on whether or not additional legal pledge(s) support the specific maturity's payment obligation, such as credit enhancement, as a result of defeasance, or other factors.
